was something in the statement he laid before the Registrar-General. And yet in the face of this, these special jurors deliberately ignored his lordship's plain direction. "If Mr. Ward voluntarily laid the information, and without the consent and knowledge of Mr. Fraser-Smith, then Mr. Fraser-Smith had no hand in any conspiracy and the defendants must be acquitted." Is it not plain as the sun at noon, on the evidence of Major-General Gordon and Mr. Arthur, in addition to Mr. Ward's assertions, that Mr. Fraser-Smith could not possibly have known the information was going to be filed and could not possibly have given his sanction to Ward? Is it not patent to the dullest perception that Ward himself didn't know anything about laying the information being contemplated until General Gordon casually met him in the Police compound and walked him direct into the Magistrate's?

Can anyone conceive the possibility of any two men, far less two men in the positions of these unfortunate defendants, not merely conspiring to ruin a person of Mackinnon's class and antecedents but actually concocting the frightful social history detailed in Mr. Ward's statement? Such a thing is quite impossible, and it must not be overlooked that the truth of a statement of this kind is shown in the witness being so confidently well founded to more than justify the independent action taken by Mr. Fraser-Smith on legal advice, in laying the matter before the Protector of Chinese.

A most careful analysis of the whole case and the Judge's summing-up convinces me thoroughly that the verdict was alike against the weight of evidence and his lordship's ruling; that there was nothing whatever to justify a conviction, and consequently that both Mr. Fraser-Smith and Mr. Ward have been unfairly convicted and are unjustly imprisoned. With regard to Mr. Fraser-Smith especially, there is not a scintilla of evidence of conspiracy in any form; he appears to have taken every precaution in dealing with the statement handed to the Registrar-General and in no way exceeded his legal rights, and this is the only matter in which his name appears throughout the whole business. The allegations of malice in a certain newspaper article are beyond the question, the said article having appeared long after the date on which the conspiracy is said to have been completed; and the other insinuations as to malicious motives are unworthy of a moment's consideration.

A grievous injustice has been done, and these two men are suffering punishment and degradation for an offence which, it is quite apparent from the evidence, they never committed. One of the first principles of good government is even-handed justice, therefore it is to be hoped that His Excellency the Acting Governor will thoroughly investigate the matters dealt with above, and on discovering (as he must) that a wrongful verdict was returned by a small majority of the jury, exercise his prerogative by ordering the release of Messrs. Fraser-Smith and Ward from a punishment to which they ought never to have been subjected. In England twelve men have to be unanimous to find a person guilty of conspiracy; in Hongkong the veto of one man, whom it took forty minutes to talk over, is sufficient to ruin and degrade two innocent men for life. In England a minority of one is equivalent to an acquittal. When shall we have that much needed Court of Appeal for Criminal Cases? It is wanted badly in this colony.

I am, Sir,
Yours faithfully,

Hongkong, 22nd November, 1890.

THE RECENT DEATH IN THE GAOL.

The inquiry into the death of a Chinese prisoner, who died in Victoria gaol on the 7th inst., was continued by Mr. Wodehouse in the Gaol yesterday afternoon. The jurors were—Messrs. J. Armstrong, D. Wood, and E. Sequeira. Dr. Marques said—The prisoner was admitted to the gaol on the 7th of July. He then put him on light labour for one week, and on the 14th of July he was put on hard labour until the 5th of August. This was crank labour, the heaviest labour in his estimation, that is given for punishment. On the 5th of August, he was put on light labour until the 20th of August, when he was again put on hard labour until the 27th of August. He was again put on light labour until the 13th of September, when he went on hard labour and remained so until he was sent to Hospital. On the 2nd of October he complained of diarrhoea, and he was prescribed for. On the 4th of October he said he was all right, and then had the usual light labour until the 24th of October when he was to have been passed for a flogging but, owing to his weak and ill appearance, he was not passed for it but sent to Hospital. On the following day he was put under observation. On the 26th of October he complained of dysentery, I prescribed for him, and he improved a little, but had a relapse and died on the 7th November. The dysentery symptoms disappeared two or three days before he died, and it was then thought he was out of danger. The actual cause of death was syncope.

Dr. Cantile said he held a post mortem of the deceased. The body was that of a young man. The internal organs were almost entirely destitute of fat. This was most marked. The heart was healthy, but the lungs were suffering from old standing pleurisy. The intestines were bloated, white, the liver was dark purple, the spleen the same and reduced to about one third its normal size. The kidneys were healthy. The lower four inches of the small gut and the whole of the large gut was the seat of dysentery. He was of opinion that the cause of death was exhaustion resulting from dysentery. He was of opinion that his treatment in gaol had something to do with his death. He considered his medical treatment after he was taken ill most judicious, and that the physical labour which he had to undergo was made suitable to his physique, but he thought the punishments inflicted, in the form of deprivation of diet, rendered him liable to succumb to any disease which might attack him. He thought that naturally the man was fairly strong. When he saw him, after death, he was extremely emaciated, attributable to the disease, but he was rather more so than he should have expected from mere dysentery. There were signs of insufficient nourishment, and the frame was altogether too emaciated for fourteen days dysentery. He had heard the details of his punishments, and was of opinion that they had to do with his emaciated condition to a considerable extent. He was aware that the punishment diet of rice and water was 15 oz. per day; on that punishment diet the tissues must waste. The punishment diet would not induce dysentery, but would render him more liable to succumb to it should he contract it. He had been informed that another prisoner in the same ward was suffering from dysentery at the same time, and that three days before the man died he was apparently recovering, that bread was served out in the regulation manner, and that the other man refused his bread as he had heard it was not good for him to take, but that the deceased ate not for his own bread but his fellow-prisoners'. If such was the case the act was sufficient to occasion the man's death. The man who refused the bread recovered.

Louis Flores, Hospital warder, said the statement made by Dr. Cantile, with regard to the deceased eating the bread, was perfectly correct. The amount of bread served to each prisoner was half a pound.

Dr. Cantile (re-called) said—The diet for prisoners on sentences of six months and under was only fit for men at absolute rest. For men on hard labour the food should be more generous. By absolute rest he meant a man ought almost to be in bed; the food being only sufficient for a man to take the amount of exercise absolutely necessary. The punishment diet was not sufficient even for a man at absolute rest. He considered the continuation for six days of penal diet injurious, but if one day's full ration intervened between the six days, the effect would not be so injurious. He considered six days should be the utmost length of treatment, and extension of that time, even with the intervention of one day's rations, would be highly dangerous. He did not think it possible that this man's death was caused by the treatment he underwent in prison, but he was of opinion that it aggravated the dysentery disease. He was of opinion that the treatment did not occasion the dysentery, it only rendered the disease the more serious. He was certainly of opinion that rice and water alone is an insufficient diet for natives in this country, no matter in what quantities it may be given.

This concluded the evidence. The jury found that deceased died of dysentery, and were of opinion that the continued deprivation of proper food, to which the deceased was subjected, greatly aggravated the disease from which he died.

HOW THE "KING" DIED.

An inquiry was held this forenoon at the Magistrate by Mr. Wodehouse into the circumstances attending the death of Wong Leong, a Tuck, better known as the "King of Siam," and who at one time was employed by us as a dramatic critic, was found in an unconscious state with severe wounds about his head on the 5th instant, at the foot of an embankment near the top of Robinson Road, and taken to the Civil Hospital where he died on the 15th instant. Dr. Atkinson, Superintendent of the Civil Hospital said that the man when admitted to the Hospital was suffering from severe wounds about the head which could have resulted from a fall. Inspector Perry stated that there were no suspicious circumstances connected with the case as the unfortunate old man had evidently got off the road during the night and tumbled over the embankment into a side-channel which would inflict the injuries that were about his head. He was about 75 years of age, and was generally supposed to be insane. In his finding of "accidental death" Mr. Wodehouse said he was glad to notice that the Press had taken such kindly notice of the deceased. He was most harmless old creature, and his death, he was certain, would be very much regretted by all who had known him. Regulated in pace.

THE "WENCHOW" "TOONAN" COLLISION.

Touching the latest collision case the New-chang correspondent of the N. C. Daily News writes under date of the 10th inst. as follows:—"The first hard blow from the north commenced last night. It is snowing to-day, and the wind is moderating. Thus far there has been scarcely any frost, and the native prognostications of an early winter are not warranted by any of the signs apparent during the last few seasons. We hear that the Wenchow and Toonan, which were both badly damaged by collision on the 6th instant, are in a fair way of being patched up so that they will be able to leave before the winter sets in. The Wenchow did their work wonderfully well, considering they could not see in the muddy water, and it required more than ordinary powers of resisting cold. As to the cause of the collision, it would not be right to give an ex parte opinion, which might be as unjust as it is illegal; but one may feel surprised that such an accident took place in broad daylight, or as bright a morning as one could wish for, in waters that could hardly be called narrow, more particularly as both steamers were going the same way against the tide, both having good pilots and experienced pilots, and a fog bell officer, etc. No doubt the Wenchow and the other will claim damages, and then light may be thrown on the occurrence." The same contemporary on the 18th states that the Wenchow arrived here (Shanghai) yesterday from New-chang, and anchored below the shipping.

JAPAN'S NAVAL FORCES.

The Tokyo Shimpō has a leading article under the heading of the "Japanese Navy," professing to be based on the remarks of an official in the Government. Says our contemporary—The system of defence of a nation should be based on some standard or other. England for instance has war-ships of a gross tonnage of 940,000 tons, and stands above France in that respect; but if we deduct from the number some 300,000 tons for vessels required to defend the numerous territories and colonies possessed by England, she would then be left with only 640,000 tons to show for her other countries. The tonnage of war ships possessed by France is about the same, and therefore the naval forces of England and France at home are equal and well-matched. There are other European nations which are equipped with navies for the defence of their coasts, but England and France are by far the greatest naval Powers in Europe. Now to solve the question of what shall be taken as a standard for the Japanese navy, we must consider what naval Powers we have to compete with. Looking at the different Oriental nations, we find that China is the only one powerful enough to enter the field with Japan; but to decide Oriental affairs now-a-days, we must consider the state of things in the West as well as in the East. Of the European Powers, England's interests require that she should act in combination with China, and Japan must therefore, in viewing the Chinese naval force, take it as well as the Pacific force of England. The eastern squadron of England, though subject to occasional changes, may fairly be taken as something like 40,000 tons. China has numerous small ships of war stationed in her larger rivers, but as they are only fit for use in rivers and inland seas, we may take her tonnage of war ships over 400 tons at 80,000 tons. That is to say we shall not be much beyond the mark if we regard the combined naval forces of China and England as equal to 120,000 tons, and take this figure as the standard for the proper defence of our country. Now let us look at the present state of the Japanese Navy: The gross tonnage of ships of war over 400 tons is only 56,000 tons, a figure less than the Chinese by 24,000 tons and less than the united Chinese and English fleets by 64,000 tons; and as to our ships, with the exception of the two now in course of construction in France and one in Yokosuka, each of 3,000 tons, which will not be surpassed by any Chinese or English ship, the rest do not at all come up to the mark. There is here plain necessity for increasing our naval forces, the present state of which is truly miserable. To develop our naval force, we must have ships of war built, and the questions of what kind of ships are required, and how their power is to be computed, have to be considered. A good fleet should comprise all kinds of ships required for various emergencies, and the proper choice of ships to organize a fleet will much depend on the form and position of the country, to be defended as well as the circumstances of possible enemies. Some say that as Japan is surrounded by seas numerous ships are required, and therefore, if necessary, ships should be sacrificed to number; but this is an incorrect view. Large ships of war are more effective than small vessels, and fighting ships, to be really effective, should be over 4,000 or 5,000 tons. England possesses numerous ships of war of several thousand tons, one the largest in the world at present, being as much as 14,000 tons. We should be guided by this, and keeping the size of the ships of the possible antagonist in view, should be able to form a proper opinion. Finally, for the calculation of our naval forces, we should take the tonnage as a basis instead of the number of ships.

A few days ago, writes the Yomiuri, some person calling on Viscount Kikuyama, Minister of Marine, asked him whether the Bill for increasing the Navy, rumoured to be now under deliberation in the Cabinet, would not necessarily add to the burdens of the people, and whether it might not be injudicious to bring forward such a scheme just when public opinion is in favour of reducing taxation. He was answered that those in office are well aware of the necessity of diminishing taxation and developing material resources, but the Navy of this country is at present insufficient to serve as a national defence, and without a sufficient national defence it is idle to talk of developing the material resources of the country. To make the Navy efficient is one of the means of enabling the people to prosecute their industries in peace and security. "When I think of the present condition of our Navy," the Viscount is represented to have said, "I am so tormented by anxiety that I can neither eat nor sleep."

The same journal reports that a Bill for increasing the navy will surely be one of the chief questions submitted to the Diet; and that a certain member of the House of Peers had remarked with regard to the Bill that a proposal to increase the Navy is not unreasonable, but that to bring it forward in the first session of the Diet would not be a wise plan on the part of Government, because even those members of the House of Representatives who are personally well disposed to the proposition may be constrained to oppose it owing to the pledges given by them to their constituents. This nobleman therefore recommended the postponement of the Bill until the second session of the Diet.

KOREA.

The Chinese Times of the 8th instant contains a very able leader on the objects and meaning of the Chinese Imperial mission lately dispatched from Peking to Seoul, the capital of Korea, from which we take the following summary:—"In the face of a strong Power, it says, China will allow her claim to suzerainty over one of her vassal States to gradually dwindle away into a tradition; while in the face of a weak one like Korea, she will assert it vigorously. The despatch of two Imperial commissioners to Seoul, ostensibly to condole with the King of Korea on the death of the Queen-Dowager, is an unmistakable assertion of China's paramount power which certain foreign advisers have been trying to persuade the King of Korea to refuse to recognize. The King will have to come outside the city to meet the commissioners, and he will have to hail to the Editor of Condolence, which will then be conveyed into the palace; not, as we understand the programme, through any gate or archway, but carried over the city wall on a bridge erected for the occasion and richly decorated with silk." The Times goes on to demonstrate how ably the Chinese have contrived to preserve on their frontiers a conguity of friendly subject States, ruled by a paper wall, but yet effectively. This worked very well until the advent of foreigners on the scene; but such a ceremony as that at Seoul has now become an anachronism. Foreign Powers have made treaties with Korea as an independent State, and their representatives find their position at Seoul far below that of the Chinese Commissioners. The condition of things must become serious before long, and it would have been better for China, not to have thus emphasised her supremacy; "for, no matter whose to blame for the actual situation—and we think China is very largely to blame, and the Western Powers scarcely less so—the ostentatious exercise by China of suzerainty rights over a country where the Western Powers hold accredited representatives in an assembly which cannot indefinitely continue."
